Our Process

1

Inspection and preparation: The first step in working on roofing and waterproofing is to inspect the roof and assess any damages or potential issues. You'll want to identify any leaks or damage to the roofing materials, flashing, or gutters. After that, you'll need to prepare the roof for repair by removing any debris, cleaning the surface, and repairing any damaged areas.

2

Waterproofing: Once the roof is prepped, the next step is to waterproof the surface. This involves applying a waterproof coating or membrane to the surface to prevent water from seeping through the roof. The waterproofing material you choose will depend on the type of roof and the extent of the damage. For example, a flat roof may require a different type of waterproofing material than a sloped roof.

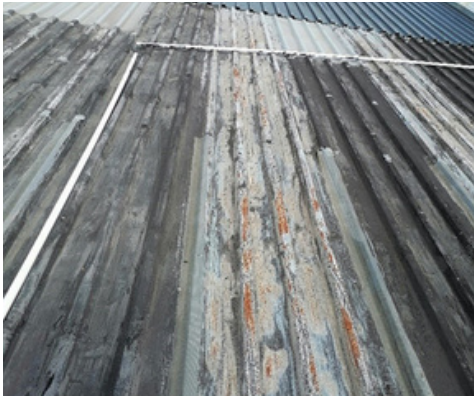

3

Roofing: After the waterproofing is complete, the next step is to repair or replace the roofing materials. This may involve replacing damaged shingles, tiles, or metal sheets, or repairing any areas where water has caused rot or other damage. Once the roofing materials are in good condition, you'll need to reapply the waterproof coating or membrane to ensure that the roof remains watertight.
